

If I Have a New Personal Injury Case, Can I Still Consult with A Lawyer During the Coronavirus COVID-19 Pandemic?

I have always had a preference for an initial, in-person conference, planning and strategy session at the initiation of every case. The Coronavirus/COVID-19 Pandemic has no doubt heightened the concerns of many prospective clients about meeting others, or meeting in public, or even leaving their homes. These are unprecedented times. People are still being injured by acts of negligence, and on the job incidents occur daily. You still have access to needed counsel. I have always extended the courtesy of a telephone consultation upon request and will continue to offer:

Complimentary, teleconsulting/telephone consultations on all personal injury, workers' compensation and criminal defense cases- generally between the hours of 7 am and 7 pm.

I invite all potential clients to participate in a no-cost analysis and strategy conference. Contact me today to arrange a time to meet!
